

THE SHACKLETON LEADERSHIP EXPERIENCE

“Any real change implies the break-up of the world as one has known it, the loss of all that has given one identity... the end of safety.”
– James Baldwin

During Sir Ernest Shackleton's 1914 Trans-Antarctic expedition, his ship, the Endurance, was lost, isolating his team on an ice floe hundreds of miles from civilization.

For Shackleton and his team, this truly was, as Baldwin describes...the end of safety.

Join us and experience this compelling case study in leadership; a multi-media presentation using sound, music, scenes, narration and photos through which we examine the story.

We will examine:

1. The nature of Leadership and its role during profound change.
2. How leadership behaviors impact the health and viability of an organization.
3. How attendees can strengthen their own performance as leaders.

This program was co-developed by The Breakthrough Group, a Chicago based Leadership Development firm, InVision, a California based Creative Communication & Production Company and Altria. This program will be facilitated by Breakthrough's founder Mitch Litrofsky.

Established in 1989 Breakthrough has designed and delivered powerful learning programs that combine the tools of the performing arts with established organizational development methodology.
